

Emma Woodhouse handsome, clever and rich,
With a comfortable house and happy disposition, seemed to unite some of the best blessings of existence and had lived nearly twenty one years in the world with very little to distress or vex her.

Exp:- The present extract occurs in Jane Austen's very famous and popular domestic novel entitled Emma.
The scholar novelist left no stone unturned in narrating the tale of the involvements and feelings of ordinary life described in this novel.

The heroine of the novel, Emma Woodhouse was a very beautiful, witty and affluent girl. She is unique among Jane Austen's heroines. She lives in a very luxurious and extremely comfortable accommodation.
She had lived such a prosperous life that she passed her days in a very happy and pleasant condition.
She appears to be a lady who had spent twenty one springs in this mortal world. She had never faced any critical situation in her life. In fact she had got the greatest blessings of survival. She had no obstacle or predicament to distress.

or perturb her.

We observe that Emma Woodhouse is one of the best drawn of Jane Austen's characters. She believed that she could see in the minds of the other people and set about the business of match-making errors with all earnestness. Many critics have rightly regarded Emma as a fantastic comedy of match-making errors.
