

An acquaintance of the famous lady Indo-Anglican
Novelist, Nayan Tara Sangal :-

Introduction:-

Nayan Tara Sangal, the novelist and political commentator has published nine novels and eight works of non-fiction. She is one of the 1st Indian writers in English to make a mark on an international readership. It is a remarkable fact that she won the Common Wealth prize in 1986 for her literary masterpiece Plans for Departure. She was conferred the 'Sahitya Akademi' award in 1986.

Sangal was born into the first family of Indian politics - the Nehrus. She saw at firsthand India's emergence as an independent nation under the prime-ministership of her maternal uncle, J. L. Nehru.

'Plans for Departure' is both a love-story and mystery. It's plot is set in a continent which is poised for revolution and a world on the edge of war.

This very novel deals with haunting power and her superb craftsmanship. This novel is very rich in intrigue. It has gentle humour and exquisite observation.
